A CARD.

We are frequently called to account in the following manner: home one calls at the Institution and says, "We sent you, Sir, a douation of provisions (or money) on such a day, but you did not schowledge it."

Our explanation in most case is this.

doubling of provisions (or money) on such a day, but you did not soknowledge it."

Our explanation in most cases is this: There are two Mission Houses at the Five Points; our building is called House of Industry (Mr. Prass's), the other building is called Five Points flavors (Methodist). If our friends about to send us a contribution should direct it to "Five Points Mission, N. Y.," it would sor reach Mr. Prass's institution, but would go to the Methodist institution, and of course we could not acknowledge in reception, because the two houses have so consection. Donations intended for us should be directed, "L. M. Prass, or B. R. Santow, House of Industry, N. Y." Grateful for the liberality of our friends, we feel bound in justice to them and to ourselves o make this statement.

These who now give indiscriminate charity to children in the street, must constantly feel that their money may be at once minused by intemperate and lazy parents, or that it may not tend to the lasting benefit of the child.

We desire our office to be the almoner for all such, and would be glad to have all poor or houseless children sent to us, or their addresses, that our visitors may ascortain their real condition.

Our plan of aiding these children is well known. We seek first to place the poor, or vagrant children in good homes in the country. During the past year we have sent out some 900 to place in the Northern and Western States. Since the Society was commerced about 4,000 have been thus placed, from the most of whom excellent accounts are received.

(2) We open Lodging Houses for them. Our Lodging House for newshops and homeless boys (No. 128 Faithous-st, has given the last year 15,000 hodgings to 3,331 boys. The Lodging House for girls (No. 181 Cherry-st.), has received several hundred.

(3) We add in enstaining five Industrial Schools, with some 800 schoolars, employing for the purpose of finding out poor children for these schools, and for the country, some six or eight salaried visitors of experience and sagacity.

(4.) We have a school for poor Italian organ-grinders and pedding children, or installing from 60 to 100 pupils, under the charge of an able teacher.

All these various enterprises are carried on, necessarily, with money expense; and the public will certainly not be willing that the children of crime or noverty should be neglected by us now, in the very severity of Winter. We have a lawys been met promptly in our calls upon the public, and we do not fear now that this important work shall be suffered to grow weak for want of means.

From The London Literary Gazette.

"One of the best books of modern travel with which we are sequalisted."

From The London Saturday Review.

"We do not know any book from which persons who know nothing of India would learn so much in so anort a time and so agreeable a manner, as they might from this.

"We have in his volume a comp-ndium of all that it is most essential to know, put together, not by a compiler, but by an acute and observant spectator and inquired."

From The London Globs.

"One pleasing characteristic of the book is the absence of exaggeration; another, the pressure of good sense.

"Mr. Minturn is never hurried. He moves from piace to place like a gentleman, and writes like one.

"He sees with fresh eyes, and although much that he has described has been described before, yet he imparts a pleasant novelty to his descriptions, and a freshness to his criticisms, became he takes an independent and unprejudded point of view. He had no purpose to serve, no party to pease. We have seldour read a piecesanter or more useful book of travel."

"There is such a healthy, manly tone about this book, it is such pleasant reading, and shows such powers of observation, that we are inclined to overlook its faults, or call them by a different name. This visitor of a day, who skinmed through India like a falson on the wing, found yet opportunity to stoop on many a goodly fact, and has quarried more truths in his brief flight than flocks of travelers of a less vigorous plume. His keen sight has detected at once the falsehood of those acquestions which made the Company's Raj so unpopular here, and isastened its fall. The scotteness with which he has discormed the difference the character of the Bohammedas and that of the Hinde, and has discovered the weak points of both, is remarkable. His power of description is no less uncommon, and in this point he does not fail far shout of Heber, and is one of the few writers on India whose notices of places would be a real hap to the compiler of a guide book."
